

Keuka Wolves

Date: 11/18/25
SUNYAC (DIII)
Record: 2-3

Lamar Lovelace (#0)

Guard, 6'2, Sr (175 lbs)

Key Stats

- Excellent in transition so far (7-11 FGA)
- Doesn't miss around the rim (10-14 FGA), however is having a slow start driving to the rack (3-9 FGA)
- Poor as the P&R ball-handler (0-5 FGA, 30 TO%)
- Having a slow start from spot up threes (2-7)

Akinlana Popoola (#11)

Guard, 5'9, Sr (165 lbs)

Key Stats

- 5-11 (45.5%) on Spot Up 3's
- On 19 Spot Ups (11 3PAs, 6 Middies, 2 Layups)
- Accounts for 30% of Teams Transition Plays (19/64)
- 4 turnovers in 11 PNR plays. (36%)

Player Profile

Lovelace looks to push the pace whenever the ball's in his hands, as this is where he plays his best. This play style makes him prone to turnovers (26.3 TO % in transition). He likes to get to the basket more than anything, while also looking to get to the line (25-27 FT). He's not shooting well from 3, and he struggles to command the pick and roll. Picking him up early, going under screens, and forcing pressure once he starts his dribble without fouling will reduce his overall impact on the game.

Player Profile

Akinlana's biggest threat lies in his ability to shoot 3's. Most of his 3's came against a zone where defending teams were late rotating. When running our 1-3-1 trap, we should be aware of where he is at all times. He seems to make bad decisions in the pick and roll where we makes bad passes and gets stripped going to his right.

Possible Defensive Strategy: Close out hard and run him off the 3 point line. We are living with his mid range jumper.

Kaleb Nutifafa (#20)

Forward, 6'6, So (211 lbs)

Key Stats

- Lead team in rebounds (9.2 RPG), however is poor on putbacks (3-9)
- Looks to be on the left block on post-ups (2-5 FGA) and drive left on spot-ups (3-4 FGA)
- Inefficient from the field (11-33); mainly shoots around the rim (8-25 FGA)
- Avoids shooting threes (only 2 attempts this season and missed both)

Makya Morrison (#24)

Forward, 6'5, So (180 lbs)

Key Stats

- Leads team in offensive rebounds (3.6 ORPG) and blocks (1.4 BPG)
- 4-9 on putbacks
- Poor on spot-up threes (1-5)
- Mainly looks to drive left (1-4 FGA going left, zero shots taken going right), however not the best in finishing around the rim (7-19)

Quinn VanKerkhove (#2)

Guard, 5'10, So (150 lbs)

Key Stats

- Used as a 3PT specialist off the bench (5-12 3PA vs. 0-3 2PA)
- Looks to be on the right wing in transition (3-3 3PA)
- 0-5 on unguarded vs 3-5 on guarded catch and shoot threes
- Struggles to defend spot up threes (5-9 3PA against)

Player Profile

Nutifafa is the first guy looking for a rebound anytime a shot goes up. He also defends very well in the post (1-6 FGA). On the offensive end, he wants to always go to his left, as he feels most comfortable doing so. He struggles to finish around the rim and doesn't shoot any threes. Getting physical while boxing out, forcing him to his right, and pushing him out of the paint will likely reduce his overall effect on the game.

Player Profile

Morrison averages 7 RPG and protects the paint better than anyone on the team. With that being said, his perimeter defense is significantly weaker (7-15 3PA against, 5-12 against on spot up jumpers). He mainly scores through putbacks and around the rim in general, however he's not very efficient in doing so. Getting physical while boxing out, pushing him out the paint, and pulling the trigger on threes when given the space will likely reduce his overall effect on the game.

Player Profile

VanKerkhove is looking to shoot it from deep at any opportunity once he comes in the game. While at face value he's had a solid start from behind the arc, he struggles significantly more when his shot is contested. Furthermore, he's not good at defending the three himself. Closing out early while he's in three point range and shooting once he gives you space will likely remove his overall effect on the game.

Kevin Felasco (#3)

Guard, 6'3, Gr (170 lbs)

Key Stats

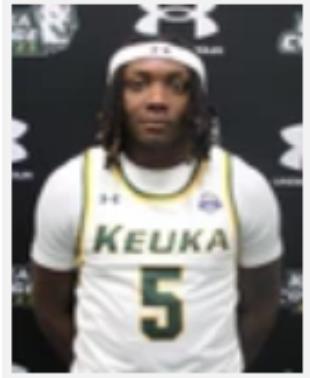

- 2 steals/game
- Very inefficient from the field (4-16), especially from 3 (2-10)
- Points scored off Transition (2-4) and as the P&R Ballhandler (2-3)
- Struggles guarding spot up threes (4-10)

Player Profile

Felasco is mainly used as a defensive asset, as he excels in winning loose balls. However, his perimeter defense is weaker. He's also not much of an offensive threat, and is very inefficient from the field. Taking threes once there's space and applying as much pressure as possible when he has the ball will likely remove his overall impact on the game.

Amar Jackson (#5)

Guard, 6'0, Jr (180 lbs)

Key Stats

- 3.8 RPG, 1.2 SPG in 13 minutes played
- Source of points are mainly around the rim (4-8), mainly putbacks (3-4)
- For all shots other than putbacks, he's 1-7.
- Has guarded 3 pointers well so far (1-6), however most of his shots faced have been threes (1-7)

Player Profile

Jackson has more of a defensive role when he enters the game. He collects all of the rebounds, and most of his points have been scored via putbacks. Getting physical while boxing out and forcing him to shoot will reduce his overall impact on the game.

Chase Welch (#14)

Guard, 5'9, Jr (175 lbs)

Key Stats

- 0-5 on spot-up jumpers vs. 3-4 on spot-up drives
- 1-7 overall on catch and shoot threes vs 3-3 on dribble threes
- Drove right 5 times on 6 drive attempts (2-3 on drives right, 1-1 on drives left)
- Tends to guard the P&R ball-handler when in the game (1-5 FGA against)

Player Profile

Welch excels on dribble pull-ups, mainly looking to go to his right when possible. He has taken a good amount of spot-up threes, however he's not as efficient in this area. Forcing him to his left and encouraging shooting off the catch by giving a little space and forcing him to make a decision will likely reduce his overall impact on the game.

JT Giannakopoulos (#23)

Guard, 6'6, Fr (195 lbs)

Key Stats

- All points were scored around the basket (4-7)
- Shots were taken through put-backs (2-3) and basket cuts (2-3)

Player Profile

Although he plays about 15 MPG, Giannakopoulos doesn't get many shot opportunities. When he does, it tends to be open looks around the rim and put-backs. Getting physical while boxing out and pushing him out the paint will likely remove his overall effect on the game.